North Dakota Department of Health Schedules Earth Day Celebration

BISMARCK, N.D. – The North Dakota Department of Health will host an Earth Day celebration for area high school students Friday April 22, 2005, from noon until 4 p.m. at the department's Environmental Training Center, 2639 East Main, Bismarck, N.D.

The event includes presentations, exhibits, hands-on demonstrations and tours of the department's newly remodeled chemistry laboratory. In addition, students will have the opportunity to visit with environmental professionals about the work they do and the education needed for these careers.

Department of Health staff will offer presentations on topics such as chemical spills, drinking water supplies and recycling. Demonstrations and exhibits will cover a variety of subjects including ground water, odor identification, radon, stream flow and air pollution. The exhibits also will be open to the public from 1:30 p.m. to 4 p.m.

For more information, contact Jim Collins or Melissa Miller, North Dakota Department of Health, at 701.328.5210.
